When did you first open?

December of 2015.

What made you decide to open in Solon?

I grew up in and live in Solon, so having my practice in Solon allows me to connect with clients from the area on a deeper level. Solon also is in a unique physical position to bridge the gap between urban and rural lawyers, which allows my clients to feel comfortable accessing the legal community.

How have you changed your business model due to COVID-19? How has the community responded?

A lot of my clientele are most at-risk so immediately we tried to limit in-person meetings as much as possible. While this, is of course, the safest option, it's hard to make the personal connections virtually. I know from personal experience that Zoom fatigue is real, and it is easiest to stick to phone calls to make that socially-distant connection easier. Clients can still drop off documents at the office, another bonus of our location in Solon.

How can the community best support you?

Remember that we're always open for business. Unfortunately, just as life doesn't stop during a pandemic, neither does the need for long-term legal care. On a personal level, we all need to take a step to check on our seniors, who have been extremely isolated due to the pandemic. Take a few minutes today to call an older loved one and talk to some of the most vulnerable and valued members of our community.
